

Faculty of Philology

- a) Teaching module
- b) Translation module

The purpose of the academic master's studies in the English language study program at the Faculty of Philology is to enable students to improve their professional and scientific knowledge and skills needed for teaching English at all levels of education, for oral and written translation, as well as for knowledge and independent use of relevant literature in the field of English, as necessary knowledge for further professional training in doctoral studies.

Within this program, opportunities are opened for students to pursue a career in the teaching profession (according to the European portfolio EPOSTL (The European Portfolio for Student Teachers of Languages link: <http://epostl2.ecml.at/>), which will prepare them as young teachers to acquire the knowledge, skills and competences necessary to work in a modern classroom. On the other hand, in the translation profession, special attention is paid to the study of administrative English (through a series of practical activities within subjects related to the language of profession - the language of law, economics and the EU institution, oral translation and interpretation), which, above all when it comes to paying attention to personal development, is necessary for the adequate implementation of the current Euro-Atlantic integration process of Montenegro.
