French Speaking Camp

The project: The town of Auzat, situated in a lovely valley in the Pyrenees mountains, organises archaeological excavations since several years, at the Montréal-de-Sos castle. It was originally built in the XIIIth century, on a rocky promontory. A mule will help you out carrying the needed material. A number of historical pieces has been found on the site: tools, pottery, coins... You will work with local volunteers from all walks of life as well as people under professional training.

Works: The person in charge of the archaeology project will guide you. The excavation takes place every day; however you will alternate 1 day of work and 1 day off with half of the group, so as to get some rest. On rainy days (if ever there are some!) you will carry out cleaning of the founded objects. This is a work that is sometimes challenging, but quite exciting if you are fond of archaeology.

The project: In 2002 the community of villages, Le Pays de Bégard bought Palacret. The site has a wealth of natural resources (rivers, fish breeding grounds) and a rich heritage (farmyard, mill, chapel), industrial heritage (flax stripping machine) and history (12th century knights' commandery) which are worth protecting and developing. The project of études ET chantiers Brittany, in partnership with local associations, is to make Palacret a citizens forum for local and international culture, so as to develop the social mixing, intercultural and inter-generational exchanges and to develop the area (from local to international). Several stages of the project are in progress with the objectives of creating a base for international workcamps, building a group of workshops (a museum of man and the environment, a resource centre), creating a cultural place(theatre, lectures, concerts...) and restoring the 12th century site. Since 2000 the community of villages and études et chantiers have organised international workcamps on Palacret and le Pays de Bégard aiming to restore and protect the local environment and heritage sites. valley, between the village of Bégard (5km from the site) which has all the local shops, and the village of Saint Laurent. There is an office of Etudes et Chantiers Brittany with a permanent project team who work in all the Pays de Bégard. Volunteers are always very well hosted thanks to the involvement of the local associations and the council members.
